

BIG DAMAGES ARE DEMANDED

Richard Derringer is Suing the Traction Company.—Case Set for Trial at Columbus Today.

PLAINTIFF FROM THIS COUNTY

Claims Car Started Too Soon, Throwing Him off and That He Received Serious Injuries.

A damage suit which is of interest in this county, was set for trial at Columbus today, the case having been venued to Bartholomew county.

Richard Derringer of Crothersville, is the plaintiff in the case and he is seeking to recover $5,000 damages from the I. & L. Traction Company.

One day in the early part of last fall Derringer started to attend the funeral of a relative in an adjoining county, expecting to go by the inter-urban route.

In his complaint he alleges that he started to get on an I. & L. car but the latter started before he was safely up the steps and he was thrown off.

He claims to have suffered severe injuries, some of which may prove of a permanent nature. Among the various injuries enumerated are a fractured skull, a broken nose and four teeth knocked out.

The damage suit was first filed in Clark county but was venued to Bartholomew. J. C. Campbell of Crothersville, is the attorney for the plaintiff while Frank Jones represents the I. & L. Company.

Among those who went to Columbus from Crothersville this morning to attend the trial were Charles Blau, August Peters, Richard Derringer, Charles Derringer, John Mathew and Dr. H. P. Butts.

Supt. H. D. Murdock, of the Traction Company, went up this afternoon.

A very enjoyable missionary meeting was held Wednesday evening at the First Methodist church. Miss Jessie Peters, who has spent some time in India in missionary work, gave an excellent address. Her talk dealt with the people, their ways and customs. A young woman dressed in an India costume, aided her in illustrating her talk.

Several of the delegates, who were here to attend the missionary conference, gave short talks.

E. C. Hancock, Fred Bacon, M. A. Bridges and Prof. J. C. Edwards formed a quartet that furnished the music. At the close of the services, a thank offering was taken amounting to $68.95 which will be used for Mission Work.

A prominent Boston lawyer says: "My father is eighty years of age and he owes his present strength and good health to Vinol."

"During the last two trying winters he never had a cold, and was able to walk farther and do more than for years."

"I think Vinol is perfectly wonderful. It certainly is the greatest blood-making and strengthening tonic for old people I ever heard of."

We wish every feeble old person in this vicinity would try Vinol on our agreement to return their money if it fails to give satisfaction. The Andrews Drug Co.

Rule Revised.

The Railroad Commission of Indiana issued circular No. 74 yesterday to Indiana interurban companies, revising the rule governing the duties of crews which change shifts between initial and terminal points. Hereafter all unfulfilled orders must be given by the persons relieved to the ones relieving and one member of the latter crew must call the dispatcher at the nearest telephone and repeat the orders to him. The orders are recorded by the dispatcher similar to original orders. This rule was revised by the commission at the suggestion of the interurban roads operating between Indianapolis and Louisville, Ky.

EXPLOSION DUE TO BLACK HAND

At Least This Is Theory of Gary Police.

TWO KILLED AND MANY INJURED

Dynamite Was Set Off Underneath Two Box Cars in Which a Score or More of Italian Laborers Were Sleeping in the Steel City—Black Hand Believed to Have Been Responsible.

Gary, Ind., May 4.—When unknown persons dynamited two box cars standing in the Kirk railway yards, in which a number of Italian laborers, employees of the American Bridge company, were sleeping, Chicago Black Hand outrages were transferred to Gary and as a result two men were killed and a score of others injured.

The injured are being cared for at the United States Steel corporation's emergency hospital. The bodies of Benedetto Aglio and Giagamo Impastato, both terribly mangled, were taken by the police to the morgue.

The dynamiting was accompanied by a deafening roar which awakened laborers sleeping in other box cars. When the smoke cleared away it was found that the ends of two adjoining cars were wrecked and near these the bodies of the two men were found.

The men who slept in the cars were severely injured and when the steel corporation's private police arrived on the ground they found the injured victims groaning and uttering imprecations against the Black Hand. Rivalry between Chicago labor agents is also advanced by the Gary police as another possible clue to the outrage.

The victims of the explosion were hired through Joe Macaluso's labor agency. Because of his success in this line Macaluso has incurred the enmity of the Black Hand and he himself has twice been the victim of dynamite plots.

BOY IN BERRY PATCH

Was Shot by Irate Farmer, Against Whom Jury Assesses Damages.

Hammond, Ind., May 4.—That a farmer is not justified in firing a load of shot at a boy whom he found in his strawberry patch is the verdict of a jury in the Lake county superior court. Henry Gruel, aged twelve, got into Gilbert Isaacson's berry patch. The farmer fired at the lad with a double-barreled shotgun and one hundred shots penetrated the boy's skin. He was disabled six months and the jury gave him $25 damages.

He Missed the Rat.

Petersburg, Ind., May 4.—Orla Gray, a young farmer of Jefferson township, was amusing himself shooting rats in his corn crib. John Sullivan passed as Gray fired and the shot struck Sullivan's horse in the eye. Gray paid $25 to the owner of the horse and turned the rat killing over to his dog.

Drowned Himself in Pond.

Mt. Vernon, Ind., May 4.—Despondent over ill health and the loss of his wife, Frank Luderman, aged sixty, a farmer living at Parker settlement, drowned himself in a pond on his farm.

SEVENTY CASES OF DYNAMITING IN LAST FEW YEARS; LIST OF OUTRAGES

Railroads the Chief Sufferers—Many Buildings Wrecked

Scarcely any Part of the Country Free From Damage

PRACTICALLY no part of the United States has been free from dynamite outrages during the last few years. In nearly all cases there was a careful preparation, showing that the outrages were planned and executed by men who knew their business.

Many of the outrages entailed a loss of life, and all caused considerable financial losses. Contractors in some cases have been driven into bankruptcy because of the lack of confidence in their ability to construct without disaster, and some contractors have been compelled to put their work in other hands.

Planning of a professional nature has been a striking feature of all the outrages. In numerous instances clocks operating the explosives were set to cause explosions in different parts of the country at exactly the same minute. Homes have been endangered, although in most cases the bombs failed either to explode or were found in time to prevent disaster.

A list of seventy of these outrages, attributed by the National Erectors' association to labor troubles, follows:

One of the earliest of the attacks was in the summer of 1905, when a watchman in a bridge under construction for the Central Vermont railroad at Miller's Falls, Mass., was assaulted. The following morning the foreman found thirteen sticks of dynamite on the bridge. The fuse had been lighted, but had become extinguished.

During the same summer an engineer found dynamite in the fire box of a hoisting engine used in the construction of the Kimberley avenue bridge, over the West river, for the city of New Haven, Conn.

Attempt on Cleveland Hotel.

An attempt was made on March 12, 1906, to dynamite the Hotel Frankfort, Cleveland, O., where a number of employees of a bridge construction company were boarding. The dynamite exploded, but the wrecked part of the building was reached in time to prevent destruction by fire.

Three sticks of dynamite were discovered in the fire box of a hoisting engine used in the construction of the Arcade building in Cleveland on April 2, 1906. The fuse had been attached and, it appeared, had been lighted.

An attempt was made one month later to wreck a derrick used in constructing a bridge on the Buffalo and Susquehanna railroad. The attempt was frustrated.

A derrick used in the construction of the Central Railroad of New Jersey was dynamited and destroyed on May 31, 1906.

Dynamite was found on a derrick used in the construction of a Nickel Plate viaduct on Sept. 25, 1905. A time clock was found also. The infernal machine probably had been dropped from a passing train, as the package had been broken open and the dynamite scattered.

During the construction of a viaduct for the P. V. and C. railroad near Clairton, Pa., a derrick car was dynamited. The outrage was committed on Oct. 12, 1906. A watchman was decoyed away from the place and assaulted.

Dynamite exploded under a bascule bridge over the Cuyahoga river at Whiskey Island, near Cleveland, O., on Dec. 30, 1906. The damage was slight.

In September, 1907, a hoisting engine used at the plant of the American Steel and Wire company, Cleveland, was dynamited and destroyed. The dynamiting was done at night.

Early in the morning of Oct. 30, 1907, an attempt was made to wreck the Baltimore and Ohio bridge at Youngstown, O. The dynamite exploded, but the bridge was not wrecked.

Railroad Bridge Dynamited.

Two months later dynamite was placed under a railroad bridge on the Newark branch of the Erie railroad near Harrison, N. J. The dynamite damaged one of the girders and blew out thirty-six square feet of buckle plate. The damage was $2,000.

Two tons of material which was to have been used on the Parma road bridge on the Cleveland Short Line was damaged to such an extent on Dec. 31, 1907, that it had to be replaced. There was a loss of $500.

On the same night ten tons of material for the construction of the L. E. and P. railroad's Mill creek viaduct was damaged, and a loss of $1,200 resulted.

Several girders for the Eagle avenue bridge, Cleveland, were dynamited the night of Jan. 17, 1908, and considerable surrounding property was damaged.

Thirty sticks of dynamite were found in various parts of a derrick car used in the construction of a Chicago and Northwestern railroad bridge over the Mississippi river at Clinton, Ia., on Feb. 16, 1908. Only a small part of the dynamite exploded. The damage was $2,000.

A month later a derrick car on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad at Buena Park, Chicago, was dynamited.

During the same month a charge of dynamite was placed on a drawbridge at Perth Amboy, N. J., causing a $1,500 loss.

A bridge near Bradshaw, Md., was damaged the same night.

A hoisting crane used in the construction of the Chelsea piers, New York, was damaged to the extent of $1,000 the night of April 5, 1908.

A loss of $1,000 was caused on April 13, 1908, when dynamite was placed under material prepared for the Philadelphia Elevated railroad.

An explosion of dynamite caused a loss of $2,000 April 26, 1908, at a bridge at Fall River, Mass.

Dynamite caused a loss on May 3, 1908, to the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad's Miami river bridge at Dayton, O. Much of the material had to be replaced.

103 Sticks of Explosive Found.

An attempt was made the night of May 21, 1908, to destroy a drawbridge over the Bronx river of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad. A watchman was assaulted, and his cries caused the would be perpetrators to flee. The men discarded a suit case in their flight containing 103 sticks of dynamite and two coils of fuse.

A bridge of the same company at Baychester, N. Y., was damaged to the extent of $1,500 early the next morning.

An apparent attempt was made the night of May 24, 1908, to destroy a Baltimore and Ohio bridge at Aiken, Md. A watchman pursued a man who was loitering about the bridge, and the fugitive tripped over a guy wire. The next morning five sticks of dynamite were found where he fell.

An attempt was made June 2, 1908, to dynamite a Baltimore and Ohio bridge at Perryville, Md. Four men approached the bridge, but were frightened away by a watchman, leaving dynamite behind them.

The same night an explosion of dynamite wrecked a steel derrick, twisted the rear wall of a big steel building out of shape and did other damage at Cleveland, O. Fourteen sticks of dynamite unexploded were found later with burned fuses attached.

The evening of June 15, 1908, a charge of dynamite exploded under a pile of material used in the construction of a bridge for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad at Somerset, Mass., entailing a loss of about $1,000.

Two charges of dynamite were exploded on the bridge of the Lehigh Valley railroad at Buffalo, N. Y., the night of July 1, 1908, weakening the structure and causing a loss of $1,500.

The Illinois Central railroad bridge in Chicago was dynamited on Aug. 6.

The same night the Harrison avenue viaduct at Louisville, Ky., was damaged by either dynamite or nitroglycerin.

Two charges of dynamite were exploded on the Eighteenth street bridge in St. Louis, Mo., on the morning of Aug. 9, 1908.

An attempt was made on Oct. 13, 1908, to destroy a bridge at Holyoke, Mass. Two watchmen found the burning fuse and put it out before any damage was done.

A charge of dynamite wrecked a portion of a bridge at Cleveland, O., on Nov. 30, 1908. The damage was $500.

Dynamite wrecked a building in Kansas City, Mo., on Dec. 24, 1908.

A loss of $500 was caused at Indiana Harbor, Ind., on March 18, 1909, when a car of steel was dynamited.

During the same month at the same place two packages of dynamite with a fuse attached were thrown from a Lake Shore freight train. No damage was done.

Opera House Destroyed.

The southeast side of the new opera house at Boston was destroyed by dynamite March 27, 1909.

A part of a viaduct at Hoboken, N. J., and considerable surrounding property were damaged by dynamite on March 30, 1909. Several persons had narrow escapes, five or six being injured.

A derrick car doing construction work at Kansas City, Mo., was dynamited on April 29, 1909.

The Cincinnati Southern bridge at Cincinnati was damaged by dynamite the next month.

Another attempt was made to wreck the same bridge on May 24, 1909, two charges of dynamite being exploded.

Considerable damage was done on June 7, 1909, to the New York Central railroad's bridge across East Ferry street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A loss of $2,000 was caused by the dynamiting of material awaiting delivery June 26, 1909, for the Pennsylvania railroad bridge at Steubenville, O.

The same night the Main street viaduct at Kansas City, Mo., under construction, was dynamited.

A suit case containing gun cotton was exploded under a pile of steel girders in the yard of the Whitehead & Kales plant at Detroit, Mich., on June 9, 1909.

A third attempt to wreck the Cincinnati Southern's viaduct was made Aug. 12, 1909. The dynamite caused $700 damage.

Dynamite partly wrecked a railroad bridge in New York city Aug. 15, 1909. A month later dynamite destroyed a derrick used in the construction of a viaduct over the New York Central railroad tracks at Buffalo, N. Y.

Another attempt on this same viaduct was made on Oct. 6, 1909.

Four Buildings Damaged.

Four buildings under construction by Albert von Spreckelsen in Indianapolis were damaged on Oct. 24, 1909. The total estimated loss was $13,000. The buildings were a telephone exchange, a library building, Mr. von Spreckelsen's planing mill and his barn.

A crane being used in the construction of a bridge near Cleveland, O., was dynamited on Nov. 4, 1909, causing a loss of $40,000. A watchman was buried under the debris and narrowly escaped death.

A bomb was exploded under four cars of structural steel on a Michigan Southern side track in Chicago on Jan. 22, 1910. It is estimated that the damage was $3,000.

Dynamite was exploded at the factory of the Pan-American Bridge company, Newcastle, Ind., on April 5, 1910. The damage was estimated at $800.

The plant of the Pacific Coast and Lumber company, Oakland, Cal., was wrecked by dynamite during the summer of 1910. It was the fourth time in two years that the mill had been wrecked.

An office building being erected in Seattle, Wash., was destroyed by dynamite in September, 1910.

Dynamite was used in two places in Peoria, Ill., on the night of Sept. 4, 1910. The plant of the Lucas Bridge and Iron works was wrecked, and the night watchman was injured seriously. Two carloads of steel girders for use in a railroad bridge at Peoria were dynamited. A two gallon can of nitroglycerin was found hidden in the steel girders of the new railroad bridge the next day. A time clock had been set, but the explosion was prevented by faulty electrical connections. The clock had been set to discharge the nitroglycerin at the same hour the Lucas plant was destroyed. A bomb exploded at the plant of the Winslow Bros. company at Chicago on Sept. 15, 1910.

Los Angeles Times Disaster.

The Los Angeles Times building was destroyed on Oct. 1, 1910, twenty-one lives being lost. The property loss was $1,000,000. This was the worst disaster due to an explosive that had been recorded.

A search the next day disclosed dynamite near the home of General Harrison Gray Otis, owner of the Times, and the home of the secretary of the Merchants' association.

In the summer of 1910 dynamite was exploded in a new church structure at Clinton, Ind., and the building wrecked. Shortly before a bridge at the place was wrecked by dynamite.

Early in the morning of March 24, 1911, dynamite exploded in the basement of the new courthouse at Omaha, Neb., causing a large loss.

The same night the offices of the Caldwell & Drake Manufacturing company, at Columbus, Ind., were dynamited and destroyed. The plant was not damaged. The Omaha courthouse was built by the Columbus concern.

On March 20 dynamite was exploded beneath a new wing of a hotel under construction at French Lick, Ind.

THOMAS F. CURLEY HAS SOME APPETITE.

Eats Thirteen Lobsters, Sixty Eggs or a Hundred Oysters at a Meal.

Sixty soft boiled eggs, thirteen lobsters or 100 oysters on the half shell at one meal is the record attained by Thomas F. Curley, the heartiest man in Rockland, Mass., who announces that he will devour a larger quantity of eggs, lobsters or oysters than any other champion eater in the state.

When Mr. Curley feels very hungry it is a common practice for him to enter a luncheon and devour all that the menu calls for. Then he asks for a duplicate order, gets it and eats all that is set before him. If he fasts for a couple of days there seems to be no limit at all to his capacity for food.

"I seldom eat on a wager," says Curley. "Chiefly I eat to satisfy my appetite, which is always good. I have hardly known a sick day since I was born in Roxbury, about thirty-three years ago. I have always had a good appetite, and all kinds of food seem to agree with me."

Mr. Curley eats four meals a day and weighs 175 pounds. In explaining his diet he says:

"For breakfast I generally have a good sized order of steak, two raw and three fried eggs, two baked potatoes, two slices of toasted bread and a pint of coffee."

"As an example of my usual dinner I may mention a large order of roast beef, with side orders of veal and lamb, a cup of tea, two pieces of pie and two orders of pudding."

"For supper an ordinary menu with me would consist of cold roast pork and beans, a side order of cold pork beef, a pint of milk, three slices of cake and a dish of cherries."

He says he has never suffered from dyspepsia.

"Oh, You Kid!" Is Barred. Hereafter it is against the law to Brockton, Mass., to say "Oh, you kid" in the streets.

STATE DEPARTMENT SOME PESSIMISTIC

Peace Conference Doesn't Make a Hit In Washington.

Washington, May 4.—Officers of the state department are pessimistic over the probable result of the peace negotiations now in progress between representatives of the Diaz administration and the insurgent army which is now investing Juarez. Whatever the result of the peace negotiations, it can have no effect on the revolution in other parts of Mexico, which has been spreading rapidly within the last few days. The negotiations with the insurgent commissioners in northern Mexico will affect only the state of Chihuahua and other sections of the country which were characterized by insurrecto forces in command of Madero. In other sections of the country, however, the revolutionary movement is headed by local leaders who are operating independently of Madero's operations. The result of the peace conference will have no effect on their activity.

According to confidential reports which have been received from government representatives in Mexico, practically three-quarters of the country is now affected.

The Spoils of War.

Laredo, Tex., May 4.—A train over the International lines from Laredo to Mexico City was held up at Santa Maria and rebels numbering about thirty went through the express car, taking several hundred rifles and about 5,000 rounds of ammunition which were being shipped to San Luis Potosi.

Preferred Death to Insanity.

Columbus, Ind., May 4.—The coroner's inquest after the suicide of Mrs. Elizabeth Long, who hanged herself, developed that she had taken her life because she believed she was going insane.

THE AEROPLANE AS AN INSTRUMENT OF WAR

It Has Proved Its Case Down At San Antonio.

San Antonio, Tex., May 4.—The big Wright biplane, now the property of the United States signal corps, lifted itself out of the slop of the parade ground at the division camp, whizzed to the east, stabbed through a low-lying bank of clouds and vanished. Frank T. Coffyn, the Wright aviator instructor, sat at the controlling levers with a watch on his wrist, a compass strapped about one leg and a decorative pistol in its holster, hanging to a convenient upright. Lieutenant Benjamin B. Foullos of the aeroplane division of the signal corps, sat beside him, an open map spread across his knees and a dispatch pad handy in a leather pocket.

In just forty-seven minutes Coffyn brought his machine down within 100 feet of General Carter's tent, and Lieutenant Foullos went in to report. His message, written from the seat of the aeroplane, conveyed to the commanding general of the division the startling intelligence that the aeroplane had located an entire division of the "enemy," horse, foot and artillery, encamped twenty miles to the north. He had plotted on the map from an altitude of 400 feet the exact disposition of the enemy's forces.

Within ten minutes of the time that the big flyer skidded over the sod before General Carter's tent, word had been sent to each of the brigadier generals in the division that they were to assemble at General Carter's tent to receive orders. The springs of action were set in motion, and the first division maneuver of the mobilized army at Fort Sam Houston reservation was on.

DROVE THEM OUT

When Rebels Quarreled Among Themselves Federals Overcame Them.

El Paso, Tex., May 4.—News from Torreon is that the federals again control Lerdo and Gomez Palacio. The insurrectos had trouble among themselves because the commanders refused to allow looting, and during the trouble the federals slipped in from Torreon and drove them out. Then the federals retired to Torreon and left Lerdo unoccupied again.

Twenty federals were killed Tuesday morning in Cariza canyon, thirty-five miles southeast of Mandalena, Sonora, when they tried to surprise a band of rebels, according to a special from Nogales. It is also reported from Nogales that the mining camp of El-lapic, situated near La Colorado, was captured by fifty insurrectos, who took thirty guns and a quantity of ammunition.

CHAPTER XXV.

THE brave woman in my arms uttered no sound as we went downward, slowly at first, but quickening our pace almost immediately. I felt her arms tighten round me a little, that was all. We so held each other that practically we fell extended to full length. I do not remember whether I was conscious of striking the top of the rocky incline or not, but I believe I was. We must have struck it at an angle which saved our limbs. I was conscious of being still whole in body. My arm protected Daria's head. My own, I suppose, I had sense enough to raise a little. The way was rough and uneven. I have thought since that this shaft was originally a stratum of softer material in the heart of the rock and that those who had originally made this death way had followed it, since the working was easy. It is the only explanation I can find for the fact that after falling almost sheer for the first few feet it should suddenly change.

Down—down faster and faster! Still feet first, I believe. Some moments I feel sure I was conscious, at others I was not. I seem to remember that our speed increased, that loose dust got into my fast closed eyes. I seemed to cling closer to Daria as if in some way she were protecting me. I seem to remember hearing the sound of the swirling water coming nearer and nearer until it roared like continuous thunder, and then a swift plunge to death.

Then came a blank. I have no recollection whatever of what happened from the moment we plunged into the water until I awoke suddenly out of a faint, it may have been, to feel a cold wind upon my face and to draw into my lungs half a dozen long breaths of it. They were drawn in rapid succession, and then I felt the water close over my head again. I put out my arms to struggle, and a weight began to slip from me. I was fully conscious in a moment and closed one arm again only just in time to prevent Daria slipping from my grasp. I turned upon my back and with considerable difficulty shifted Daria's position until she lay upon my chest. With one hand I steadied her and with the other and my legs I struck out for shore close beside the rock.

Fortunately for us the waters on this side, though running rapidly, had no swirling current in them. I had but to keep afloat and steer myself with my free arm and feet. I approached close to the bank, and there, straining at the painter, was a boat, the water lapping noisily from its bows. I had to use force to unclasp Daria's arms from my neck. Perhaps I hurt her a little, for she sighed again. Standing in the water, I lifted her into the boat, then, working my hands along the gunwale to the stern, I got in myself. It was a comparatively easy matter to wrench the rope from its fastening on the bank, and the next moment we were drifting sharply down the stream. Not yet had I time to attend to Daria. I seized the oars and worked hard to get across, making slow headway, but drifting a great deal.

Of immediate pursuit I had no fear. Probably they would not go to my dungeon until the morning. It was Count Vasca they sought, and those who attempted to follow after him, even if they knew the way he was to take, would have to fight their way out of the city. O'Ryan had told me that friends were watching over the count's safety that night. That some one had betrayed Vasca would probably only precipitate the revolution by a few hours. Strange that the success with which the count had arranged his plans should be the means of our safety.

I lifted Daria from the boat and laid her on the bank. Then I let the boat go downstream. It had served me well. It would be ill if its presence should tell tales of me at dawn tomorrow.

Then I looked to Daria, and even as I bent over her she opened her eyes. "My love," I whispered, "we are safe."

I should never have reached the woods had I had to carry her all the way. She roused up presently, which is hardly to be wondered at, what with the cold and the jolting.

I set her on her feet. She must have been less bruised than I, for she walked more easily than I did.

"Clinton!" "Daria!" We went on in silence, our hands clasped. The rest of the journey to the woodcutter's hut she helped me far more than I helped her. I should have fallen from sheer exhaustion and slept had she not been with me.

"Clinton, there is some one in the woods close to us," Daria whispered suddenly.

I was alert in a moment. Approaching danger aroused me as nothing else could.

There was a shout.

"Vasca!"

For one moment I hesitated. Then I answered, "O'Ryan."

There was a crackling of the branches, and the Irishman stood in the path before us.

"You have been long."

"We are here," I answered.

"Why, man, that is not like your voice. What has happened?" And he caught hold of me. "Wet too. The boat was there."

"Yes, but we did not come the way we intended. Give me some wine. I am thoroughly done. A little rest and I shall be all right," I said.

"Rest must wait. We cannot stay here. Your highness is wet too." And O'Ryan offered her the flask.

"Must we start at once?"

"Yes, at once."

The wine did me good. I took a longer draft of it than would have been good for me at any other time. It drove the cold out, and the blood began to leap through my veins again. In the saddle I felt a new man, and, with Daria between us, we began our journey.

The day dawned as we galloped on ward. We did not talk. Neither Daria nor I had inclination to do so, and O'Ryan, I think, kept his eye upon both of us lest we should become exhausted and fall from our saddles.

The sun was hot as we began to climb the lower hills, and then O'Ryan called a halt.

"An hour's sleep for you both and then we will go on again. See, yonder is Yadasara; the sun catches the ram parts on the rock summit. I will watch while you sleep."

When O'Ryan succeeded in rousing me I found that Daria was sitting beside me looking almost herself again, though in a somewhat dragged condition.

"I said one hour. You have slept three," said O'Ryan. "I awoke the princess more easily."

"I am a new man," I said, rising.

"Her highness has told me how you came last night. Faith, it is a marvel that you are here now. Come with me."

I followed him. He pointed toward Yadasara.

A great cloud hung over the plain, and as I looked a flame shot up from the midst of the cloud and then another.

"Fire," I said.

"They are too busy to think of you this day. The revolution has commenced."

"Vasca was to be king today."

"Aye. His followers are probably wondering why he does not come to lead them."

"Is it time to mount? It would be hard to be captured now."

Daria's soft voice and her clinging arm recalled me to the present.

"It is time."

"In your country we will forget this."

"I shall never forget it," I answered.

"You will be with me. How shall I ever forget?"

We mounted and sped onward again, and then I remembered another person in Drussenland.

"O'Ryan, where is Bridget?"

"In Yadasara."

"You would not bring her?"

"She would have been unhappy away from the house by the walls."

The princess looked at me and was silent. But she never quite forgave O'Ryan. He had deserted a woman, she declared. She did not know how capable Bridget was of looking after herself.

So we rode on, and no one followed us. And the farther we went the more our spirits lightened.

It was far in the afternoon when we reached the spot where I had first entered Drussenland, where O'Ryan had cried "Halt!" so stentoriously and where I had found that the legend of this country was true. I showed Daria the spot where I had fallen from the mountain pass, the straight black line, though it did not look so now, over which poor Mustapha had shot out to find a new country—not the one he had for years dreamed of, but a better one, I trust.

The road we were traveling ended almost abruptly. A rocky barrier was before us, into the foot of which the river rushed noisily. A narrow path went up around the side of the rock.

"IS THIS YOUR COUNTRY, CLINTON?" Daria whispered.

"The water rushes through the rock to somewhere. The path should lead us somewhere, too," said O'Ryan.

"We will try it," I said, dismounting.

I helped Daria from her horse and we began the ascent.

"I see no way out here," said O'Ryan, "and it's a noisy place to spend the night in."

THE END.

"I see no way either," I answered. "There is one consolation. If they come after us they will hardly follow us here."

So far as we could judge we were standing midway between where the water leaped from the rock to where it touched the ground below.

Daria had not spoken. Now she drew my attention to the fact that the water fell clear of the rock from which it sprang.

"May there not be a way behind it?" she suggested.

"I remember how close it sounded when I came into Drussenland," said O'Ryan excitedly. "Your highness may be right."

"Were you mounted when you came?" I asked.

"No; on foot, but there were horses. We were led up a path, and then our eyes were bandaged. I remember it was a short journey after that."

"This must be the entrance to Drussenland," said Daria.

"Faith, it's the way out we're after," O'Ryan returned.

Further search showed us a cavern which was hidden by the jutting rock. It turned and twisted for a few yards and then opened upon a narrow pathway which crossed the rock behind the falling water. I saw a narrow path. So it was. I have traversed narrower, but with sheer rock on one side and falling water for a wall on the other any path would look too narrow for safety.

"This is the way, Clinton," said Daria.

There was a catch in her breath as she spoke. I did not wonder at it.

"The longer we think about it the harder it will become," said O'Ryan practically. "I'll lead the way. If I pitch over you must decide whether it is worth while to chance the crossing."

He was right. Looking at a difficulty never made it easier. He took his horse firmly by the bridle and started. Daria went next, and I followed. It was a perilous journey, more perilous by reason of the horses. But we accomplished it, and a short climb brought us out upon the path where Mustapha and I had commenced our journey to this land of legend.

"Is this your country, Clinton?" Daria whispered.

"No, my love. We have a long journey yet before us, but there are no dangers here. Those are past."

We mounted our horses and clattered along the road to Brayle.

It was strange entering the low door of the inn. The familiar scene made the time seem short since the first time I had entered it. A wood fire was crackling on the hearth, and round the table, drinking their thin wine, sat three men.

They rose as I entered, a scared look upon their faces.

"We thought you were dead—killed perhaps by that madman Mustapha," said the landlord.

"No; I am alive, you see, and hungry. Have you entertainment for three hungry travelers?"

"And Mustapha?" questioned one of his companions.

I recognized him.

"Ah, my friend, you do not know all the paths upon the mountains. The legend was true. Supper first, the tale afterward."

"Better leave the tale until tomorrow," said O'Ryan. "Faith, it's not only supper I want, but a bed."

There was bustle in the inn that night, but shortly I told them the tale before I went to bed.

"But the treasure?" said the landlord, with glistening eyes, as I finished.

He would not have understood had I told him of Daria, so I answered shortly as I rose from the fireside with a yawn:

"Treasure! There was no treasure!"

Did I not say when I commenced this history that I should hardly believe it myself had I not one incontrovertible proof of the truth of it always before me?

If I doubt, as indeed I almost do sometimes, I have only to look at my wife. How else would Daria be with me had I not passed through these adventures in Drussenland?

Daria! My little wife! How well she fits her English home! Yet how strange it was to her at first! It took her long to learn that in England I was only a private gentleman, that she was only Mrs. Clinton Verrall, a person of some importance certainly, but not a princess. She could not understand why my queen should think so little of such a brave knight as I was.

And then her wonder at all she saw! On this theme I could write a sequel to this history. It had been strange enough slipping from civilization into the middle ages, but of the middle ages we have read in books. What must it have been for one leaping from the middle ages to civilization? There were no books to help Daria.

But the sequel will not be written, I fancy. It could only be humorous, and even were I capable of writing such a history, with a smile in every line of it, I should not do so. I could not have my little wife laughed at I have laughed at her myself sometimes. It is true—I did when she saw her first train steaming into a station, but then I am a privileged person.

Of O'Ryan I have seen little since we parted with him in London. Twice only, I think, has he been to visit us, and he is the only one who persists in addressing Daria as "your highness." He has not forgotten Drussenland.

Nor have we quite. It was a fancy of Daria's, and I humored her. In my library hangs a picture of myself clad in armor, which I had to borrow from a costumer for the occasion, and underneath is a little tablet fixed into the bottom of the frame. Some day the reader and I may become acquainted, and I will show it to him. And the legend on the tablet runs thus: "Str Verrall, Knight of the Silver Star."

DECLARES KILLING WAS AN ACCIDENT

Officers Discredit Wealthy Farmer's Story.

Fowler, Ind., May 4.—John W. Poole, the wealthy Benton county farmer in jail here, accused by his son Emory of the murder of Joseph Kemper, a German laborer employed on the farm a year ago last December, admitted to Sheriff Shackleton and Marshal Bowman that he had killed Kemper, but that the killing was accidental.

Poole told the sheriff and marshal that on the Sunday of the killing he was climbing over the fence at the back of his house with a shotgun in his hand, being in pursuit of a rabbit running across the yard. Kemper, he says, was standing near. Poole declared that in getting over the fence the gun was discharged and that the full charge from the gun blew off Kemper's head.

This part of Poole's story is discredited by Sheriff Shackleton, who declares that all indications point to the fact that Kemper was murdered in the kitchen of the Poole home. As to Charles Clark and Charles Mack, two other farm employees who are missing and believed by many to have been slain by Poole, the accused man declared he knew nothing. He said they had left his place of their own free will and he had not heard from them since. This same explanation was previously given as to Kemper, Sheriff Shackleton said.

NEW EXTRADITION LAW

Representative Korbly of Indiana Proposes Change in Existing Statute.

Washington, May 4.—Representative Korbly of Indiana has introduced a bill to amend Section 5278 of the revised statutes of the United States, relating to the extradition of persons charged with crime. He would so amend the statute as to make it imperative that a person shall not be extradited unless he shall have a hearing before a court of record.

Mr. Korbly introduced the bill after he had much correspondence with labor leaders at Indianapolis with respect to the removal of J. J. McNamara from Indiana to California.

After The Grippe

"I am much pleased, to be able to write and thank you for what Cardui has done for me," writes Mrs. Sarah J. Gilliland, of Siler City, N. C.

"Last February, I had the Grippe, which left me in bad shape. Before that, I had been bothered with female trouble, for ten years, and nothing seemed to cure it.

"At last, I began to take Cardui. I have taken only three bottles, but it has done me more good than all the doctors or than any other medicine I ever took."

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

For the after-effects of any serious illness, like the Grip, Cardui is the best tonic you can use.

It builds strength, steadies the nerves, improves the appetite, regulates irregularities and helps bring back the natural glow of health.

Cardui is your best friend, if you only knew it. Think of the thousands of ladies whom Cardui has helped! What could possibly prevent it from helping you? Remember you cannot get the benefit of the Cardui ingredients in any other medicine, for they are not for sale in any drug store except in the Cardui bottle. Try Cardui.

Pull Together

Dissension in a town makes the grass grow in the streets. Unity makes the trade grow in the stores. Other things being equal, a city is usually as big as the faith of its people.

If they believe in it enough to sink all differences and pull together you can bet dollars to doughnuts that town is on the up grade.

When all the merchants unite for the good of their burg it is a safe gamble that home trade will unite itself to them.

It is better to have the long green in the tills than the grass green in the streets.

Unity makes the long green grow.

The town that does not pull together will be pulled to pieces.

DYNAMITING OF LOS ANGELES TIMES MAY HAVE BEEN SOLVED BY ARRESTS

Prosecution Declares It Has Clear Case—Defendants Call It "Frameup"

W. J. Burns, Detective, Has Worked on Many Other Celebrated Cases

THE arrest of John J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers; James B. McNamara, his brother, and Ortie McManigal, a structural iron worker, on charges of having been responsible for the dynamiting of the Los Angeles Times building on Oct. 1, 1910, when the lives of twenty-one men were lost, has proved one of the greatest sensations of recent years. The detectives who caused the arrests and the prosecuting authorities declare that they have a clear case against the prisoners, whereas the labor leaders and friends of the accused men charge that the entire affair is a "frameup."

The trial promises to be one of the bitterest ever contested in the criminal courts of this country. Organized labor will raise an enormous defense fund, and Clarence S. Darrow, the noted lawyer who was counsel for Haywood, Moyer and Pettibone in connection with the Coeur d'Alene mine troubles in Idaho, will be in charge of the case for the accused.

The Los Angeles Explosion.

At the time of the explosion which wrecked the Los Angeles Times building the structural iron workers of that city were on strike, and the Times was unfriendly toward the workers. The explosion occurred early in the morning. The discovery of a time bomb which had failed to work at the home of F. J. Zeehandelaar, secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' association, and a reported attempt to dynamite the auxiliary plant of the newspaper and the finding and explosion of still another bomb at the home of General Harrison Gray Otis, editor of the Times, led to the belief that a widespread plot existed against the forces that had been fighting organized labor in Los Angeles.

A disavowal of labor union responsibility was made by the strike committee of the metal trades, members of which had been on strike for some months and between which organization and the Times there had been some bitterness.

Rewards aggregating thousands of dollars were offered for the capture of the dynamiters.

The Merchants and Manufacturers' association has spent $50,000 in the hunt.

Who McNamara Is.

John J. McNamara was born in Cincinnati, where his parents are still living. For six years, up to four years ago, he had lived in Cleveland, where he worked at his trade and was very popular with the structural iron workers. Two years after his arrival in Cleveland he was elected president of the local union, and three times he was a delegate to the international conventions from that body. Six years ago he was elected international secretary, and he has since been re-elected five times. Four years ago Indianapolis was made the permanent headquarters of the international secretary, and McNamara removed to the Indiana city. He took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar there. He had expected to be chosen international president some day.

James B. McNamara served a term in the boys' refuge home in Cincinnati when he was a lad.

WILLIAM J. BURNS, the detective who made the arrests in connection with the Los Angeles dynamiting, had previously acquired fame by such important convictions as that of Abe Ruef, the San Francisco boss, and the Oregon land grabbers.

Mr. Burns' father was for a time commissioner of police of Cleveland, O., and when he was himself only twenty he entered the United States secret service, in which he remained for twenty-two years, till he acquired the reputation with Chief Wilkie of being the best man he had. His first job for the government was the running down of Bill Brockway, who had a counterfeiting plant in New York. It took him several months of steady work, but he got his man at last and sent him away for a long term.

Counterfeiters Run Down.

For years Mr. Burns was employed mainly on counterfeiting cases, the most famous of which resulted in the arrest of Taylor and Bredell and their eleven confederates for uttering a number of forged hundred dollar Monroe head silver certificates. In this case the principal guide the detective had to the identity of his men was that only highly skilled engravers could possibly have carried through the job. Such men are rare in this country, and he gradually narrowed down clues by a process of elimination.

To obtain evidence to convict, however, was a matter of long watching and much ingenuity. He had to obtain entrance to the office of the suspects while they were at luncheon and conduct his investigations in a way to evade suspicion. When at length he made his arrests his evidence was still not complete, and it was essential that he should bluff his first prisoner into admissions that would incriminate the other. This he managed to accomplish and by this combination of patient work and shrewdness achieved one of the most important captures ever made by the secret service.

In 1903 Burns was detailed from the treasury department to help Secretary Hitchcock in the Oregon land frauds. This was the beginning of the association of the detective with Francis J. Heney, the lawyer who cleaned up San Francisco. The result of their work was the conviction of Senator Mitchell of Oregon, F. A. Hyde of San Francisco and the rest of their gang. In this case the knack that Burns possesses of extorting confessions at the moment that his resources are exhausted was again displayed at a number of critical junctures.

Third Degree on Ruef.

Then Mr. Heney was asked to undertake the investigation of the San Francisco situation, and he brought Burns with him. It was not long before the detective found that in all the maze of municipal corruption the most vulnerable point was the French restaurant scandal. He at once began a surveillance of Ruef, installed one of his own men as the boss' chauffeur, put other of his operatives into the city employ and awaited results. One night one of the ring talked a little too freely in his cups, and next morning Burns knew all about it. From this he learned that the supervisors were implicated in the graft as much as Ruef and Mayor Schultz.

Still there was no legal evidence, but Burns got it by means of the third degree. Ruef showed signs of wanting to run away, and Burns had him confined in the care of an elisor. From that time on the boss found his life a burden to him. He was never free for a moment from the presence of one of Burns' men, and day by day he was pilled with all kinds of tales of what the detective had discovered. At length the boss broke down and made up his mind to confess all.

ROYAL Baking Powder Economy

The manufacturers of Royal Baking Powder have always declined to produce a cheap baking powder at the sacrifice of quality.

Royal Baking Powder is made from pure grape cream of tartar, and is the embodiment of all the excellence possible to be attained in the highest class baking powder.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price, and is more economical at its price than any other leavening agent, because of the superlative quality and absolute wholesomeness of the food it makes.

Mixtures made in imitation of baking powders, but containing alum, are frequently distributed from door to door, or given away in grocery stores. Such mixtures are dangerous to use in food. In England, France, Germany and some sections of the United States their sale is prohibited by law. Alum is a dangerous mineral acid, and all physicians condemn baking powders containing it.

The label of alum baking powders must show the ingredients.

MILLS' SUCCESSOR

May Be Selected Tonight.—Interesting Time Expected.

The city council will hold a special meeting tonight and one of the matters of importance to come up will be the election of a councilman to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. S. Mills.

Although attempts to determine upon a man have been made, the efforts it was stated this afternoon, have not yet succeeded.

The Democrats having three members and the mayor can of course elect if they can agree upon a man.

Several names of active and receptive candidates have been mentioned. It is reported that Davison and Misch are for Chris Moritz but that Taskey is holding out for William Buse. An effort was made to get Buse to withdraw but he declined. Arthur Jerrell has also been talked of for the place. Victor Fetting has been solicited by friends to be a candidate but positively refused.

Dr. L. M. Maines Sr. and Fred Miller, Republicans have been talked of and Alf Cox has also been suggested. Some who have been studying the situation believe there is a strong possibility that the balloting tonight may not result in an election.

It will either be necessary for some candidate to receive four votes or that there shall be a 3 to 3 vote, giving the mayo. a chance to cast a deciding ballot.

Seymour Temperatures.

The following are the maximum and minimum temperatures as shown by the government thermometers at the Seymour volunteer weather observation station and reported by J. Robt. Blair, observer. The figures are for twenty-four hours ending at noon:

Weather Indications.

Fair tonight and Friday. Light frost north and central portions tonight.

A King's Library.

Frederick the Great employed architects to build a library, but they fought with true professional etiquette over their designs. The monarch who had braved the might of Europe was not to be defeated by a parcel of nagging professional men. "Confound you," said the king, "don't waste any more time! This cupboard opposite me is of a very good design; copy that." They did as they were ordered.

HOLDING BACK THE EVIDENCE

State Not Ready to Disclose Its Hand.

ARRAIGNMENT OF McNAMARAS

Will Probably Be Based Upon John Doe Warrants Alleging Minor Charges Simply as a Means of Holding Prisoners Until Such Time as Certain Points in Evidence Held by State Can Be Cleared Up.

Los Angeles, May 4.—Bringing with him, according to reports from the east, a duplicate of the confession made by Ortie McManigal in Chicago, W. J. Ford, deputy district attorney, has arrived in Los Angeles from Indianapolis, but refuses either to affirm or deny that he has it.

The deputy prosecutor evaded answering many questions. He said he would make no statement regarding his trip or the evidence he obtained until he had conferred with J. D. Fredericks, his chief, and perhaps not then.

John J. McNamara and his brother, James B. McNamara, may be arraigned this afternoon. It has developed, however, that they probably will not be charged with the dynamiting of the Times building and the killing of the twenty-one men. The prosecution wants to avoid submitting its evidence in the main case at the arraignment of the McNamaras, and therefore may resort to John Doe warrants and minor charges to hold the prisoners. It is admitted that there are some points in the evidence to be cleared up, and that if the defense got possession of it at this time it would gain an advantage.

District Attorney Fredericks declined to say what the minor charges against the McNamaras will be. "They might be charged with carrying dynamite in a public conveyance," he said.

The prosecutor went to the jail with a stenographer and for an hour talked with Ortie McManigal, apparently amplifying points in the latter's confession. Later Detective McLaren of the Burns agency and Detective Reed of the Chicago force, in whose house McManigal made his first confession, took charge of the prisoner for a short time.

A dispatch received here brought news that the finger prints obtained from James B. McNamara had been received in San Francisco and are to be compared with those found on the launch Peerless, used to carry the dynamite J. B. Bryce and his associates brought from Giant to South San Francisco. Despite the confidence the defense displays that Clarence Darrow will come to Los Angeles, rumors persist that he will not. It is asserted the case, as laid before him, looks so strong against the men that he is not willing to take the defense.

DECLARED ABSURD

British Archaeologists Laugh at Weird Tale From Jerusalem.

London, May 4.—The foreign office and the Turkish embassy know nothing of the reported sacrilege and burglary in the mosque of Omar at Jerusalem. An expedition headed by M. B. Parker got a concession from Turkey in 1909 to excavate in the search for treasure supposed to have been buried by Jewish kings and for a supposed manuscript proving the resurrection of Christ. The members of the expedition worked secretly and mostly at night, that they might not awaken local fanaticism. They found valuable antiquities, but no treasure, and lately returned to England. They say that the story is absurd; that a burglary was impossible, as two Turkish officials always accompanied the explorers, and moreover the mosque is frequented by worshippers night and day. It is assumed that the story is the pure invention of anti-foreign fanatics who had learned of the excavations.

DREAMING OF RICHES

West Virginians Excited Over Discovery of Long Lost Silver Mine.

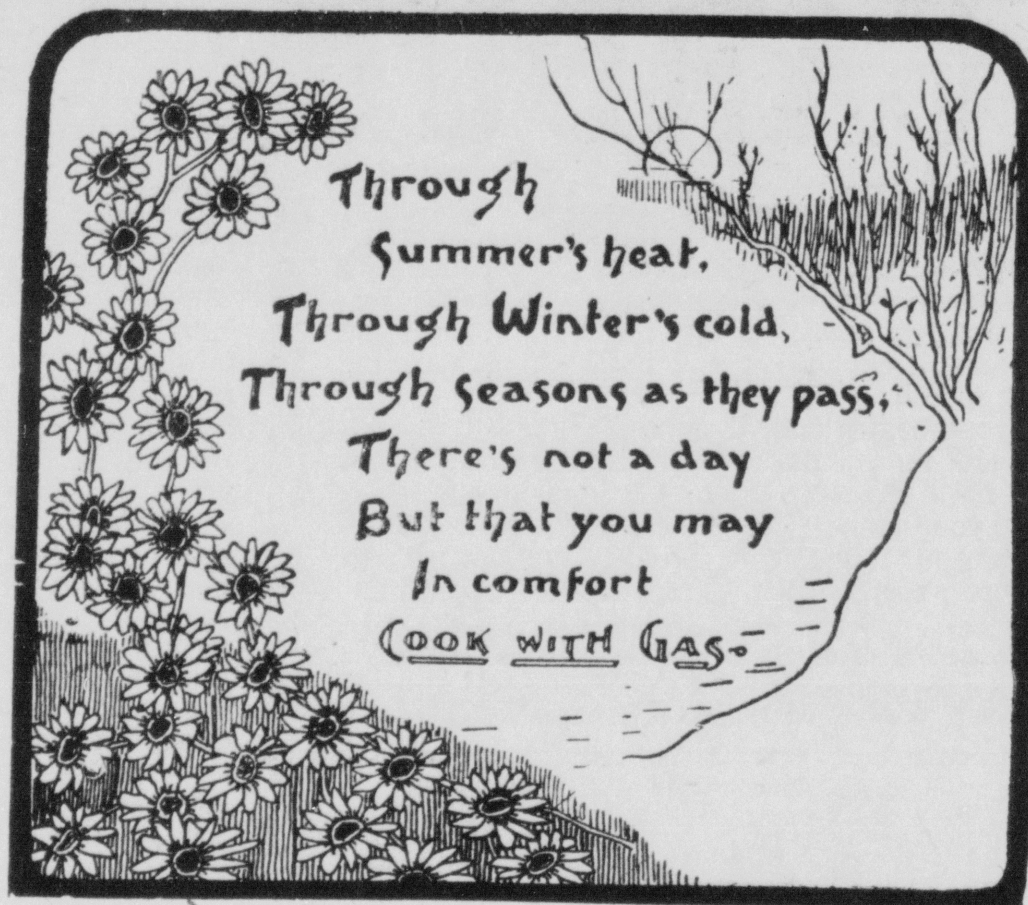

Berkeley, W. Va., May 4.—Silver ore in paying quantities has been discovered on Keeney's Knob, in Greenbrier county, and there is great excitement in that section. Tradition has had it that the Indians once mined silver in that vicinity, and for years there has been a hunt for the metal.

The vein of silver on Keeney's Knob was discovered by Harry Curl, manager of the Commonwealth Lumber Company. Samples sent to a Pittsburgh laboratory showed on analysis silver at the rate of 36.14 ounces a ton, with a slight trace of gold. The present price of silver is 51 cents an ounce, which would make the ore average $18.25 a ton, and traces of gold may increase this to $25 a ton.

Another Dynamite Mystery.

Carrollton, Ind., May 4.—Two hundred pounds of dynamite has been at the railroad station since last Friday, waiting for the owner, but no one has called to claim it. The box is addressed to E. L. Davis, but there is no one by that name known here. The name of the consignor does not appear on the box. Just what was the purpose in shipping it here cannot be even guessed by the officials.

J. K. VARDAMAN

Former Governor of Mississippi Has Been Called on to Explain.

Manganese and Its Uses.

Manganese is one of the substances which had long been used in the arts before its existence as an independent metal was recognized. From prehistoric times it was employed as a coloring material, but it was not known to be a distinct metal until 1774. In India the primitive smiths used it as a flux and as an alloy for holding iron and bronze. Today its power as an oxidizer, rendering it a most important disinfectant, and its value as a chemical reagent, as well as its increasing use as an alloy, caused an active search to be made for its ores. It is widely distributed, forming about one-thousandth of the substance of the earth's crust.

Antiquity of Engraving.

Gems were engraved at a very early period of the world's history. The very oldest specimen of this art in existence is believed to be a square signet of yellow jasper engraved in the year 1450 B. C. and now in the British museum. The engraving upon it is a faithful picture of the horse of Amenophis II., and the characters underneath have been deciphered as being the names and titles of that monarch.

Jackson, Miss., May 4.—There was alarm among the Vardamanites when it became known that a subpoena had been issued demanding Vardaman's appearance here next Monday, before Charles J. Moore, an expert accountant. Mr. Moore has been checking up the affairs of the governor's office for several years back and cannot find vouchers for large sums that he thinks passed through Vardaman's hands during his four years in office.

"The Best in the World"

As the bride led her friends into her cool, spotless kitchen, they broke into a chorus of approval.

"Well, I am proud of it," she said, "and proudest of all of my stove. It's a New Perfection Oil Cook-stove, and I think they are the best in the world. They toast, roast, broil and bake equally well—really to perfection—and the kitchen stays much cooler and cleaner than with any other range. This stove cuts my kitchen work almost in half."
